A REPORT ON EDUCATIONAL TECHNOLOGY TRENDS

DATE: 27/02/2019 and 28/02/2019

RESOURCE PERSON: Dr. Kiranlata Dangwal (University of Lucknow)

Dr. Shaheen Fatima (Karamat Girls College)

On the above mentioned days Sri Krishna Dutt Academy organized a seminar for B.Ed students of session 2018-2019 related to modern technology trends that are becoming part of the our education system. Both the speakers discussed on the latest trends in education and explained following trends in education.

On day first resource person talked on following points:

- 1. Personalized Learning: Educational technology is increasingly focused on personalized learning experiences. Adaptive learning platforms use algorithms to tailor learning materials and pacing to individual student needs, optimizing engagement and understanding.
- 2. Remote Learning Infrastructure: Educational technology companies have developed platforms for virtual classrooms, video conferencing, and content delivery to facilitate distance learning.
- 3. Gamification and Immersive Learning: Gamification techniques, such as badges, rewards, and leaderboards, are being integrated into educational platforms to enhance student motivation and engagement. Additionally, virtual reality (VR) and augmented reality (AR) technologies offer immersive learning experiences, enabling students to interact with content in new ways.
- 4. Artificial Intelligence (AI) and Learning Analytics: AI-driven tools analyze student data to provide insights into learning patterns and areas for improvement. Learning analytics platforms help educators track student progress, identify at-risk students, and tailor instruction accordingly.
- 5. Mobile Learning: With the widespread use of smartphones and tablets, educational technology is increasingly mobile-friendly. Mobile learning apps and platforms allow students to access educational content anytime, anywhere, catering to diverse learning preferences and lifestyles.

On day two the resource person discussed on following trends:

- 1. Open Educational Resources (OER): The availability of OER, including textbooks, videos, and interactive simulations, continues to grow. OER provide educators and students with free or low-cost educational materials, promoting access to quality education worldwide.

- 2. Collaborative Learning Tools: Educational technology platforms facilitate collaboration among students and between students and educators. Features such as real-time document editing, discussion forums, and collaborative project tools support teamwork and knowledge sharing.
- 3. Block chain in Education: Block chain technology is being explored for its potential to verify academic credentials, securely store student records, and prevent academic fraud. Block chain-based platforms offer transparent and tamper-proof systems for managing educational data.
- 4. Data Privacy and Security: As educational technology becomes more prevalent, ensuring the privacy and security of student data is paramount. Educational institutions and technology providers are implementing robust data protection measures to safeguard sensitive information.
- 5. Digital Citizenship and Online Safety Education: With the increasing reliance on digital tools and platforms, there's a growing emphasis on teaching students about digital citizenship and online safety. Educational technology is being used to deliver interactive lessons on topics such as internet etiquette, cyberbullying prevention, and media literacy.

These trends reflect the evolving landscape of educational technology, driven by advancements in technology and pedagogical research, as well as the changing needs of students and educators in a digital age.

Workshop on

The Chemistry of Early Life

Date: 8, 9 November, 2019

Venue: Seminar Room

The science department of Sri Krishna Dutt Academy organize a two-day Workshop on “The Chemistry of Early Life” 8, 9 November, 2019. The workshop aimed to enhance the knowledge of pupils about Chemistry of Early Life. Over two days, educators, pupil teachers & key note speakers converged to exchange insights and strategies.

Key Themes Discussed:

Explore the fascinating relationship between chemical reactions and language development in early childhood in an interactive workshop setting. Learn to recognize chemistry in children’s everyday lives, find opportunities for age-appropriate chemical exploration, and create rich learning experiences through the topic of chemical reactions that teach the outcomes of the Early Years Learning Framework. The origin of life presents a particularly difficult problem for chemistry because it is essentially unconstrained: there are a very, very large number of reactions that might have occurred on peribiotic Earth, and few hard limits on the types of compounds that might have been available, on the possible reaction conditions, and on the processes that might finally have led to elementary cells of the type that we now know. What is, however, clear is the central conundrum of understanding “life”: that is, that a living cell is composed of molecules; that molecules in cells are reacting; that neither the molecules nor the reactions are individually alive; but that the cell—as a collection of reactions and processes—is alive. Understanding how that transformation might have occurred—from an intractably large number of possible components, to an assembly of networks with an emergent property (“life”), is the central problem of the field, and one of the big problems in all of science.

The objectives of this research program are to develop an understanding of the plausible reactions that could occur on the peribiotic Earth.

We, thus, wish to:

- i) constrain the problem to simplify and focus the task of other scientists who are interested in making the structurally complex molecules that are essential in current life;

ii) attack some of the problems of concentration, catalysis, and network formation that are essential to the formation of spontaneously evolving, dissipative systems;

iii) assemble plausible lists of elementary reactants and processes leading toward those commonly found in current metabolism;

iv) develop rationales for the existence of “chemical fossils”: that is, molecules, reactions, and processes that seem to be common to all life (so far as we know), and thus seem to offer hints about the very earliest, common, stages the formation of proto-cells.

Conclusion:

The workshop on “The Chemistry of Early Life” served as a platform for educators to engage in meaningful discussions, share innovative practices, and envision the future of education. By harnessing the power of technology, multisensory approaches, and inclusive strategies, educators are better equipped to create dynamic learning environments that empower all students to succeed.
